The explanation is that the first letter, or phonetic element, of the Expetion name of each of these objects was identical with the corresponding letter in "Cleopatra," the word for knee beginning with "k" or "c," that for may be ginning with "k" or "c," that for loss with "i," that for reed with "c," that for may with "k and that for mouth with "hand for each of the name came another "a" represented by a second eagle.

All this shows that a complete phonetic system of letters, k, a system based on sounds, and not on pictures of objects, existed along with the kind of hierostyphics just described, since the latter depended upon the use of the initial letters, or sounds, of the main already have been analyzed. It is probable that the purpose of these hierostyphics was the production of ornamental inscriptions, somewhat as "Whenever our tobacce supply gave
